SAF Awards for Best NS Units

19 Jun 1999

The Singapore Armed Forces (SAF) organises the Best National Service (NS) Unit Competition each year to enhance the operational readiness of the Army's NS battalions through friendly competition, and promote greater esprit de corps among NSmen.

The high state of combat readiness ensures that the SAF remains a credible fighting force and serves as an effective deterrent. It is crucial for Singapore to maintain a well-trained and highly-operational citizen army as this ensures continued peace, stability, and progress.

There are six categories for the Best NS Unit Competition:

- a. Best NS Infantry/Guards Unit
- b. Best NS Armour Unit
- c. Best NS Artillery Unit
- d. Best NS Combat Engineer Unit
- e. Best NS Signal Unit
- f. Best NS Combat Service Support Unit

The NS battalions were assessed on their overall fighting capability as well as the individual proficiency of their NSmen. The assessment criteria are:

- a. Combat Proficiency Test
- b. Silent and open mobilisation exercises
- c. Individual Physical Proficiency Test
- d. Marksmanship Test
- e. Percentage of deferments from In-Camp Training.

The winners of this year's awards include 531st Guards Battalion; 6th Signal Battalion; and 6th Direct Support Medical Battalion, which had won awards in their respective categories last year. The consecutive winning of these awards is testimony to the NSmen's efforts in maintaining their high level of operational readiness.

The Deputy Prime Minister and Minister for Defence, Dr Tony Tan, will present the awards to the top 11 NS units during the SAF Day Parade on 1 Jul 99.
